Bridging the learning gap

Skating away on ice

Learning to Glide on Ice

Peggy Fleming and Scott Hamilton they're not.

But Upland youngsters are having fun wriggling into their skates and trying to gracefully glide across the ice.

In an area of the country known for its hot lifestyles and temperatures, ice skating is increasing in popularity.

Liane Zemel and Don Bartleson teach ice skating lessons through the Upland Recreation Department. Classes are taught at the Ontario Ice Skating Center.

Their beginners' classes usually are packed with exuberant youngsters, and occasionally with oldsters who want to learn the sport.

"It really doesn't go by age. It goes by attitude, but most of my students are children," Zemel said, referring to the skill level and age needed to succeed with skating.

"The hardest thing for instructors to help the children overcome is their fear of falling and getting hurt. Once the fear is gone, they love it," she said.

Visitors to the rink are welcomed with a burst of frigid air. A jacket and gloves are welcome accessories to the day's dress.

"I keep busy so it doesn't seem so cold," said 7-year-old Natalie Wang.

Zemel joked that the rink resembles a giant "refrigerator."

Bundled in snowsuits, scarves and heavy-duty sweaters, the children put on their skates, wobbled toward the rink and stepped out onto the ice.

Some made it. Some didn't.

Danielle Caraveo, 5, was one of the latter ones. But she didn't seem to mind.

She simply picked herself up and made it to the rink wall, waiting for further instructions.

Mothers, fathers and siblings watched from the stands, offering looks of encouragement in between a few smiles.

"OK, I want you to do the two-foot glide and then lift one foot," Zemel told the children.

Then each took his or her turn trying to make it to the other end of the rink.

After the lesson, Zemel decided to review yet another, more important, one — how to stop.

"I wanted to take lessons because I don't know how to skate," said 8-year-old Beth Shew, a bit annoyed. "I don't mind falling or the cold weather in here because I dress warm. I've learned to snow-plow stop and stroke so far, and it's been fun."

Zemel has been teaching skating for the past six years, but has been skating a "lifetime," she said.

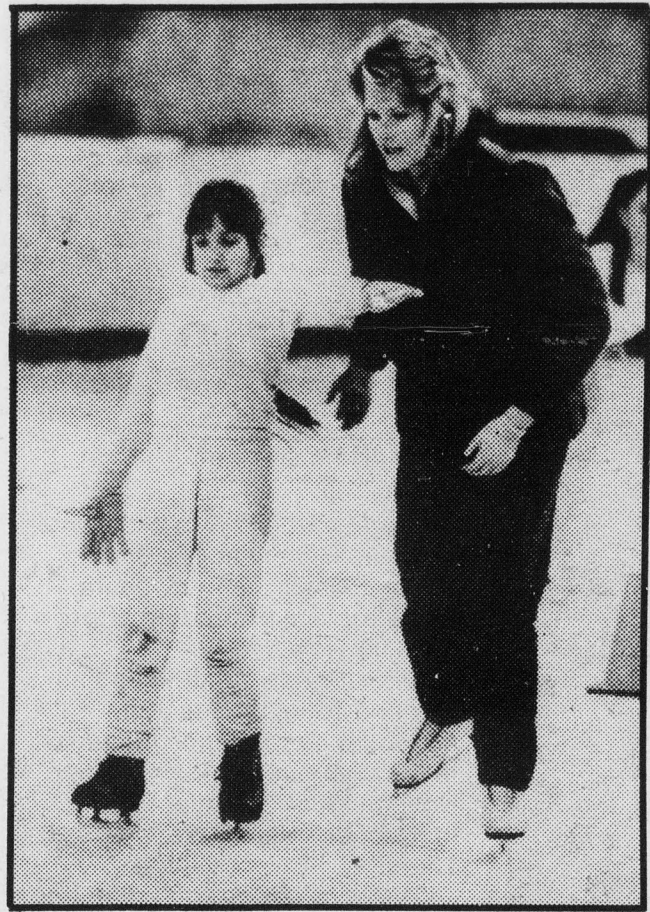

"The course is eight weeks long. The children are only in their third week now, but they're doing pretty well. All I want them to learn by the end of the course is the basics. I hope they then will continue to skate and have fun," Zemel said.

Zemel said ice skating isn't foreign to Southern California.

"You know, competitive skaters don't practice on ponds or lakes, even in the North. They practice in rinks," said the former Ice Follies performer.

Ice skating, she said, is an ageless sport that can provide a lot of fun for those willing to try. □

Nicky Lies uses a word program to learn better writing skills on one of Cabrillo's "talking computers."

Two 'talking computers' bridge the learning gap

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Sometimes it takes a computer to bridge the gap for a child with high potential and low achievement.

That's where Naomi Spenser, the resource specialist at Cabrillo School in Upland, comes in. She uses "talking computers" for special lessons for children having problems with writing, spelling and reading comprehension. One of the computers has an electronic "robotic voice." The other one imitates a human male voice.

Using a keyboard helps a child with problems forming letters on paper learn to write creatively, she said.

"The child learns to write freely, without worrying about how to form letters," Spenser said.

While it doesn't replace handwriting lessons, which she still works on with the children, it avoids unnecessarily discouraging the child about other skills.

The first computer, donated to the school by its PTA 1 1/2 years ago, can hear as well as speak. It has a program which shows a picture of a clown on its screen. The computer will not go on to the next symbol until the child has pronounced the word matching the image to its satisfaction. Another program asks the student to spell the word out.

If the child cannot figure the problem out, all he has to do is say "help" and the computer will pronounce or spell the word once, then ask the student to repeat it.

The second computer, donated by the Upland Kiwanis this school year, has learning games similar to the popular video games.

"It's a real motivator," Spenser said. "They work hard (at their other exercises) so they can prove they're ready for the computer."

And once they get on the computer, they can't forget their work and just play, because the lessons are the play. For instance, in one game the students must answer multiplication problems correctly in order to get to the next stage of the game.

"The kids never forget work because they're trying to get the treasure chest," she said.

Students can learn about SAT tests

Preparatory courses again will be offered by the Assistance League of Upland for those planning to take the Scholastic Aptitude Tests, college tests.

The courses will be held at 8593 Archibald Ave., Rancho Cucamonga.

Most colleges and universities use scores from the SAT as determinants of admittance, placement and for scholarship awards.

The preparatory courses will be conducted Feb. 25 and 27 and March 4, 6, 11 and 13. The test is scheduled March 15.

The preparatory courses before the May 3 test are scheduled April 15, 17, 22, 24, 29 and May 1.

The $15 tuition fee is designated for the teachers' fees. Books and refreshments will be provided by Assistance League of Upland.

Gallery loses funding, may have to close

By Marianne Aiken

The 14-year-old Rex W. Wignall Museum/Gallery at Chaffey College may have to close its doors for lack of funding after June 30.

Unless a new funding source is found soon, the museum will no longer be a science resource in the community, said Chaffey College Vice President for Instruction Mike Alexander last Thursday.

Chaffey College zoologist Jim DesLauriers said the museum is often the only contact local elementary schoolchildren have with science.

"Elementary schools are an insatiable audience," DesLauriers said. "In most cases the teachers don't have the resources or the time to do it. That's supposed to be your vaccination against science."

Alexander said the museum's present method of funding, through fees for community service and continuing education classes, is no longer viable.

"We can't fund it the way it's been funded any more," Alexander said. "We can't pull the kind of money that's required out of community services and continuing education.

"It gets to the point where we're going to drive people away if we keep raising the price (of classes)."

Alexander said there are limitations on how the college can spend the money it gets from the state.

"This is not real big on the priority list of the state," he said. "It's pretty much a losing proposition."

The 2,500-square-foot building houses revolving art and science exhibits, and is equipped with a flexible wall system.

In addition to exhibit preparation space, the museum features a conference room for workshops and lectures and has a full range of audio-visual equipment.

More than 185 exhibits have been presented at the museum since it opened in 1972, attracting more than 100,000 participants.

The museum currently features an exhibit called "Skeletons in Our Closet," showing, through a display of animals' skeletal systems, how animals adapt to their environments, defend themselves, and obtain food.

Students to get hands-on experience in leather crafts

The Upland Recreation Department will be offering a hands-on experience class in leather crafting beginning March 3.

Students will learn the skills of leather carving, tooling and dyeing, and each student will make a wallet and key case from start to finish in the class. All supplies are available from the instructor, Tod Andrews, at a discount.

Classes are held at the Community Center, 352 East C

St.(corner of Third Avenue and C Street) in downtown Upland.

Cost for the five week session is $25 and the class is held on Monday 7:15-9:15 p.m. Teens and adults are encouraged to sign up for the class in advance.

Registration is presently being accepted at the Upland Recreation Department, 651 W. 15th St. (Magnolia Park), Monday thru Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., including the lunch hour. For additional information call 9850994.

Chaffey College group to lobby in Sacramento

People for Community Colleges (PFCC), a Chaffey College support organization, is getting ready for its second annual lobbying trip to Sacramento.

On May 10 about 200 students, teachers and other people interested in community colleges will pile into buses for an overnight ride to Sacramento, rest up the next day, then lobby state legislators on May 12, designated "Community College Lobbying Day."

PFCC Director Tim Arner said the focus of the lobbying efforts will be to gain funding parity for Chaffey College.

Another purpose of the lobbying day is to alleviate common misunderstandings about what community colleges do and who attends them.

Arner said attendance at this year's lobbying day is especially crucial because the Master Plan for Higher Education is currently being rewritten.

To help fund the trip to Sacramento, PFCC is holding a Las Vegas Nite March 1. Arner said sponsors are still needed for tables, and the group is also looking for door-prize donations. The grand prize is a weekend trip for two to Las Vegas.

PFCC will also hold a Founders Day mixer March 14 from 4 to 6 p.m. at the Opici Winery in Rancho Cucamonga. The public is invited to attend.

Developers tell council they are not 'anti-tree'

By Marianne Aiken

Saying that they have been "misrepresented in the past," local builders went before the Rancho Cucamonga City Council to emphasize that they are "pro-tree."

The council was considering amendments to a controversial tree preservation ordinance Feb. 5 that was to be voted on Wednesday.

Tom Kohl, a legislative analyst with the Building Industry Association, told the council that, contrary to what "was said earlier, developers are in no way anti-tree."

Kohl and Michael Vairin, Director of Administration and Planning for The Deer Creek Company, both emphasized that developers like trees.

Vairin and Kohl both called to complain about a phrase used in an article in The Daily Report which appeared Jan. 20 about the tree preservation ordinance which stated, "The issue has developers pitted against those who wish to preserve the historic nature of the city ..."

"We've been misrepresented in the past," Kohl told the council.

Kohl went on to present a letter from Cary D. Lowe, Senior Associate Counsel to Lewis Homes, a major developer in the city, which stated that Lewis Homes would maintain the blue gum eucalyptus trees only "against our better judgment" because of numerous "safety hazards" posed by the trees.

"Builders in general would echo Lewis Homes' sentiments in that we think the trees are dangerous and we would prefer to plant the spotted gum," Kohl said.

Lowe's letter warned of the trees' "vulnerability to toppling in high winds, their tendency to drop large branches at unpredictable times, and their continual dropping of highly inflammable bark and foliage."

Vairin successfully pressed the council to revise the ordinance so that tree removal permits can be issued as soon as "all discretionary approvals have been obtained" from the city.

The ordinance previously called for both discretionary and non-discretionary approvals to be obtained before the tree removal permit could be issued.

"It would be all the way down to the issuance of the building permit before you could remove the tree," Vairin said.

The ordinance calls for the protection of selected blue gum eucalyptus windrows and the expansion of the historic windrows system by replacing the blue gums with 15-gallon spotted gum eucalyptus trees as development occurs.

The ordinance was restructured to provide guidelines for residents and developers to follow when a tree removal question arises.

The new preservation policy calls for removal and replacement of the so-called "heritage" trees only when absolutely necessary because of disease, safety hazard, or utility maintenance purposes.

The ordinance does not override the tree preservation policies of the Etiwanda Specific Plan.

Day at races slated

The Alliance of Latino Business Associates, a non-profit corporation, is planning a Sunday "day at the races" at Santa Anita Race Track.

The event will be a fund-raiser for the organization's Lupe Bieggar scholarship fund for local students.

A tax-deductible $25 donation will provide an infield luncheon for guests. For more information, call 981-3824 or (213) 684-0877 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Family planner answers what many won't ask

By Suzanne Sproul

Laura Randell remembers when she had a lot of questions and not too many people were willing to provide answers.

"I remember when I was 18½ and getting married and I thought I knew everything," the registered nurse/practitioner with Euclid OB-GYN Medical Group said with a smile and a wink. "I think we're all getting our heads out of the sand. Educating men and women of all ages about family planning is the key."

Randell is a familiar face in West Valley high schools and women's clubs. She discusses family planning openly and with a touch of humor when requested. She also donates her time and services to the House of Ruth, a shelter for abused and battered women.

Randell said if her efforts can help prevent at least one unwanted pregnancy and the trauma associated with it, then she has accomplished a great deal.

"So many people are afraid to ask questions. Some don't know what to ask. You'd be surprised how little people know about family planning," she said.

Her role is as a teacher, not a judge, according to Randell. She presents the facts and lets women make up their own

Districts not expected to need new agency

By Patrick McGreevy

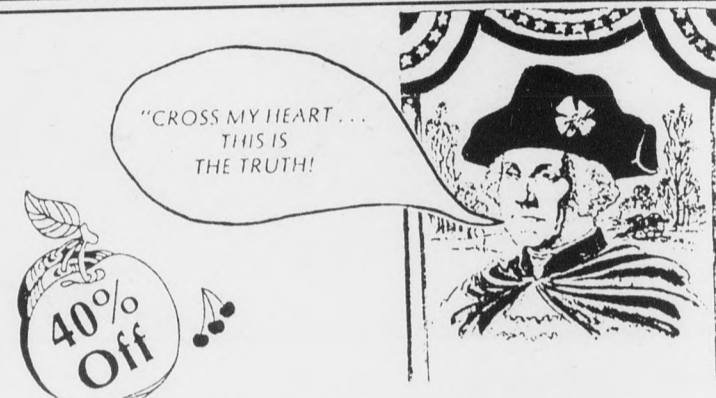

School districts in the West Valley are not expected to need a new joint powers agency proposed by the San Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools aimed at more efficiently providing relocatable classrooms for crowded districts.

The joint powers agency recommended by the county Planning Commission for approval by the Board of Supervisors next Monday will be used primarily by desert school districts, according to Don Stabler, a consultant for the county schools.

Stabler said the school districts in the desert have a greater need for coordinating the collection and spending of developer fees than do districts in the West Valley, which have been collecting fees for years.

Still, the urgency ordinance See SCHOOLS/Page 8

No early return of van seen

By Patrick McGreevy

Upland's senior citizens are not expected to see the return of the van that used to drive them to a hot lunch program, at least for the rest of this fiscal year ending June 30.

That word is despite an effort to transfer ownership of senior citizens vans to the county to save a Fontana organization high insurance costs.

Still, the transfer could save thousands of dollars in the fiscal year beginning July 1 for the non-profit Steelworkers Old Timers Foundation, according to the organization's executive director John Piazza.

For six months, Upland's senior citizens have been without a van to transport them to a hot-lunch program put on by the Foundation, Piazza said.

The foundation has been unable to pay a driver for the van nor could it afford the cost of maintenance and operation of the vehicle, Piazza said.

A large part of the foundation's financial woes stem from this year's large increase in liability insurance premiums. While the county has been giving the foundation a steady $74,000 per year for the last five years to provide transportation for West Valley seniors and home-delivered meals, the cost of insurance for the fleet of vans increased $38,000 this year alone, Piazza said.

A proposal made last week before the county Board of Supervisors would have the foundation transfer ownership of 14 vans to the San Bernardino County Office on Aging.

The county would then extend its self-insured vehicle liability program to the vans, which would continue to be maintained and operated by the foundation, Piazza said.

Piazza said the transfer comes so late in the fiscal year that savings will likely not be enough to allow restoration of the Upland van to service.

Another problem also cropped up last week.

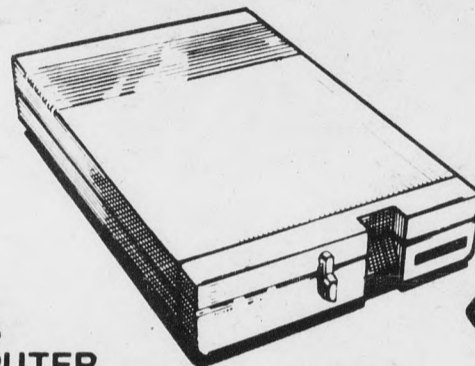

Second District Supervisor Cal McElwain asked Feb. 10 to delay action on the transfer of van ownership when he learned that the Upland van was not included.

Without the van being transferred, it might not ever be put back into service because of the high insurance premiums, McElwain said in requesting a week's delay to rectify the situation.

If insurance is received for the Upland van, Piazza said it may begin operation again after July 1 with money saved on insurance premiums taken over by the county.

Clubs don't worry about losing spark

By Marianne Aiken

Area service clubs say the spark will not be taken out of the Fourth of July if they can't sell sparklers any more.

The Rancho Cucamonga City Council took another look at an ordinance regulating fireworks Feb. 5 after receiving recommendations from the Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC).

The council put off making a decision at its Jan. 2 meeting until the CAC could comment on the issue that has been smoldering since last August.

In its next incarnation, the ordinance will include a ban on the sale of sparklers in the city, but local service clubs who look forward to taking their turns on the city's fireworks sale rotation say they won't be hurt by the move.

David Kiedrowski of the Rancho Cucamonga Kiwanis Club said he had no problem with the idea of banning the sale of sparklers, even though the club relies heavily on the money it makes during the fireworks sale.

Kiedrowski said the Kiwanis Club is on rotation to sell fireworks every six or seven years.

"We need the money," he said. "Whenever we get it, we have plenty of places to put it."

Carl Smith of the Cucamonga District Host Lions Club said he was part of the group of service club representatives who negotiated with the Foothill Fire District to keep fireworks after the district proposed banning them.

"We ... agreed with the fire department that 26-28 percent of the (July 4 fire) damage is caused by sparklers. That's why we negotiated to leave the sparklers out," Smith said.

Lowell Gomes, chairman of the city's Chamber of Commerce Government Relations Committee, which worked with the fire district and service clubs to hammer out an agreement everyone could live with, said the proposed amendments would not ban the use of sparklers, just the sale of them.

In addition to the ban on the sale of sparklers, the main regulations of the ordinance as discussed by the council Feb. 5 would mean that fireworks could not be sold before June 30; that purchasers would have to be at least 18 years old and be able to prove it; and that fireworks could only be discharged during a 24-hour period between midnight July 3 and midnight July 4.

Assistant city manager Bob Rizzo said the first public hearing on the ordinance will probably be March 5.

Kathy Frey

Sparklers like this one will be a thing of the past in Rancho Cucamonga if a proposed fireworks ordinance making it illegal to sell sparklers in the city is passed.

drafted to help desert districts begin to collect fees for temporary classrooms does contain provisions allowing West Valley districts to join the agency, Stabler said.

Stabler is recommending that the joint powers agency created by interested school districts collect a fee of $1,200 from developers for each housing unit built in the district.

The agency would then provide all of the member-districts with a standard portable classroom based on their need, Stabler said.

"By pooling our efforts we will be able to get portables for less cost and in a more timely manner," he said.

Besides improving the ability of crowded school districts to obtain new classrooms quickly, the joint powers agency will also provide a uniform fee throughout the member districts.

"Right now you can have an $1,800 fee for a house built on one side of the street and a $2,000 fee on the other side if it's in another school district," Stabler said.

The urgency ordinance is the result of a committee formed by the county Superintendent of Schools more than a year ago which included members from school districts, cities, the county and the Building Industry Association.

Politicians tell big crowd they're against project

By Marianne Aiken

A standing-room-only crowd packed the Rancho Cucamonga City Council chambers last Thursday night during an environmental impact hearing on a proposed mining operation in Etiwanda.

The hearing was arranged by county Supervisor Cal McElwain, who drew cheers from the crowd when he said he was against the project.

McElwain received $1,224 in 1985 campaign contributions from the Fourth Street Rock Crushers, the San Bernardino company that is behind the proposed Day Creek Sand and Gravel Mining Operation.

Other local politicians used the hearing to make it clear that they are against the proposal.

Rancho Cucamonga Mayor Jon Mikels, who is running against McElwain for the 2nd Supervisorial District seat in the June primary, reminded officials from the county office of land management that the City Council passed a unanimous resolution last May opposing the project.

"Plain and simple, we feel the project is incompatible with present land uses," Mikels said. "Rancho Cucamonga is committed to providing a high quality living environment for residents."

The project would include a mining operation and concrete and asphalt plant located below ground level, about three-quarters of a mile north of Highland Avenue, one-quarter of a mile east of the extension of Milliken Avenue, and one mile west of Etiwanda Avenue, extending north to the water and power right-of-way just below city limits.

For the first three to five years of the 40-year mining operation, a temporary processing plant would be located above ground.

Tom Paradise, a consultant for Fourth Street Rock Crushers, started off the hearing with an explanation of the project.

Paradise was interrupted repeatedly by catcalls and boos from the audience, which consisted mostly of residents from the Victoria, Deer Creek and Terra Vista neighborhoods, which are located near the proposed mining operation.

Fashion show slated

"I feel a little bit like Custer at his last stand here," Paradise said.

John Jaquess, director of the county land management department, reminded the audience that the hearing was held not to decide whether or not the project should be approved, but to determine whether an environmental impact report (EIR) of the project was correct or not.

Residents brought up the project's impact on the big horn sheep preserve on Mt. Baldy, the seismic safety of the mining operation, the possibility of spills from oil containers on the site, and said the wind, dust, noise and traffic impacts were incorrectly estimated in the EIR.

The EIR estimates the wind impact based on wind measurements at the Ontario Airport, not Etiwanda, where the project will be located.

"I didn't find anything in the EIR that addressed the peculiar wind patterns in the area," resident Patricia Berona said. "As anyone in this area knows, you have to experience the wind to appreciate it."

Resident Joel Langley, who said he had been in the trucking business for 12 years, said he doubted that truck traffic related

McElwain: Contribution was proper

Second District county Supervisor Cal McElwain said he didn't think anything was wrong with his accepting more than $1,200 in campaign contributions from Fourth Street Rock Crushers.

McElwain appeared last Thursday night at a hearing on an Etiwanda mining operation proposed by Fourth Street Rock Crushers of San Bernardino, saying he was against the project.

McElwain received $1,224 in 1985 campaign contributions from the company.

"They can't buy my vote," McElwain said when asked after the meeting if he thought there was an appearance of a conflict between publicly voicing opposition to the project while accepting campaign money from the company.

"I send out invitations to people whether they support me or not," McElwain said.

to the project would be confined to Highland Avenue.

"Three or four times a day, they're going to swing down to Circle K on Foothill Boulevard and get their coffee," Langley said.

"One thing the EIR fails to address is the people," said resident Jim Jebbia. "We're part of the environment."

Many of the people in the audience had concerns about the project's impact on the resale value of their homes. One speaker estimated the combined loss for Victoria residents would be $50 million, if homes failed to appreciate at least $5,000 each because of the impact of having a mining operation across the street.

Jim Bailey, vice president and regional manager of the William Lyon Co., developer of the Victoria planned community, said Fourth Street Rock Crushers should be held to the same standards he and other developers have to adhere to in the EIRs for their projects.

"This city would never let me get anything through if I didn't have an acceptable EIR," Bailey said. "How much money does the county make in this deal? Has it been projected? I know it has, but nobody wants to say."

Children play in a vacant lot behind Foothill Boulevard on Helms Avenue. Rancho Cucamonga officials sent a warning letter to the owner, Allsize Rancho Cucamonga, and two other property owners this week. Residents are complaining about trash and standing water there.

Motorists drive R.C. residents crazy

By Marianne Aiken

Residents of Helms Avenue in Rancho Cucamonga are hopping mad about motorists speeding up and down their street, but the city and the sheriff's department consider it a minor problem.

"The problems that seem monumental to them seem infinitesimal to us," said Sgt. Charles Burris of the Rancho Cucamonga sheriff's substation.

In addition to the speeding problems, residents are complaining that vacant land that has been purchased but sits undeveloped at the north end of their street is making the neighborhood look bad.

The problem is one of new commercial growth clashing with established residential neighborhoods, a trend that residents of Helms believe has already led to blight.

"We don't want it to become like Compton is, with residential blight," said Jim Green, of 8235 Helms.

"It's going to become worse when all this is developed," he said, pointing to two vacant lots behind the commercial strip of Foothill Boulevard between Hellman and Archibald avenues.

Helms runs south from Foothill Boulevard, in between two new fast-food restaurants.

Sylvia Gardner, of 8234 Helms, said motorists from Foothill have been using Helms as a through street to Devon Street, turning west on Devon to get to Hellman Avenue.

"We have a 25 mph speed limit posted but some people come down here at — I swear — 50 miles per hour," said Gardner.

Gardner and Green have gone so far as to post cardboard signs on the street in the summer which say "slow — children playing."

When Gardner shouted at the driver of a passing car to slow down last Wednesday afternoon, the occupants responded with an obscene gesture.

That's the response she typically gets from drivers, Gardner said.

Debris from the vacant lots at the top of the street floats down neighborhood gutters when it rains, Gardner said.

One of the lots has an empty hole in it that fills with water whenever it rains, she said.

The hole was dug to accommodate the foundation for a building that was never constructed.

The land was later sold to someone else. "The piece of land at the top of the street is an unofficial swimming pool," she said. "There's no other way to put it. I'm tired of cleaning out the gutter and doing the city's work," she said.

Gardner said she and her

McElwain wants to know if plan is consistent

By Patrick McGreevy

Are the county's development standards for land north of Rancho Cucamonga consistent with or as high as those imposed by the city within its borders? That question was asked last week by 2nd District Supervisor Cal McElwain.

McElwain asked county planners Feb. 10 to determine whether their development standards within their West Valley Foothills Community Plan north of Rancho Cucamonga are consistent with the city's standards.

McElwain's district includes the cities of Rancho Cucamonga and Fontana, which border the 18,000-acre county planning area.

McElwain said that Rancho Cucamonga City Council members have contacted him about a potential for conflicts between the two jurisdictions' standards.

The supervisor received board approval for the county planners to do an "analytic comparison between the two to see if there is any incompatibility."

Rancho Cucamonga Planner Otto Kroutil said one of the city's main concerns is density of residential development and how the county's plan will be interpreted.

"It seems that in terms of the big picture the actual land use issues are not incompatible," Kroutil said. But he said some specific areas' land-use designations may be interpreted as allowing up to 14 homes per acre in contrast to the city's standard of four homes per acre.

One of the interpretation issues involves the use of "gross density" in which the county might allow higher density in one part of a project site because other parts of the site are undevelopable, Kroutil said.

"The plan never really has been tested as far as 'here's a project, this is what the standards really mean,'" Kroutil said.

There were incompatible density standards proposed for the Hunt Club property which partly was in Rancho Cucamonga's sphere of influence before it was annexed into the city of Fontana last year.

Concerns over the standards the county would apply in the Foothill plan area north of Rancho Cucamonga led some city officials last year to ask for a study on the potential annexation of unincorporated land into the city.

Mt. Baldy residents rally around lodge owner

By Brandon Griggs

The town of Mt. Baldy is rallying behind one of its most well-known residents — Mt. Baldy Lodge owner A. Ron Ellingson, recovering in an Upland hospital after breaking all four limbs in a motorcycle crash last month.

Dozens of the town's 300 residents have offered their time and money to help Ellingson's family defray the costs of his treatment at San Antonio Community Hospital, where he has been in intensive care since the Jan. 28 accident.

A spaghetti dinner, to be held at the lodge to benefit the family, is scheduled for March 11. Members of the Mt. Baldy Community Club have raised $300 for Ellingson's family, with very little publicity.

And in the last three weeks, about 60 people have donated blood in Ellingson's name at the Ontario Blood Donor Center, according to supervisor Dee Dee Gregory. Another dozen would-be donors have been turned away, she said.

"Everybody's trying to pitch in and pull this thing together," said John Mitchell, marketing director for the Mt. Baldy Ski Lift and a close family friend of the Ellingsons.

"People had already called before they heard about this who wanted to do something for the family," said Mitchell, who has acted as a spokesman for the Ellingsons since the accident.

In the close-knit town of Mt. Baldy, most residents seem to know most everyone else, and everyone certainly knows Ron Ellingson. "He's pretty well entrenched in the community," said Mitchell.

A popular man who also sells real estate and runs a woodcutting business, Ellingson, 33, could be found most nights greeting friends at the door or pouring drinks behind the bar at the Mt. Baldy Lodge.

The lodge, a restaurant and bar which serves as an informal gathering spot for town residents, has been owned by the family for about eight years. Ellingson was on his way up to Mt. Baldy last month when his motorcycle crossed over into the southbound lane on a curve, just north of the Icehouse Bridge, and struck an oncoming car head-on.

Ellingson sustained two broken arms, two broken legs, a crushed foot, a crushed femur, and a crushed pelvic bone, among other injuries.

He was listed in good condition last week, although he will require extensive reconstructive surgery and may be in the hospital another two months.

Ellingson's father, Abel R.

Ellingson, is president of the medical staff at San Antonio Community Hospital. He has been overseeing his son's surgery.

"He's very fortunate to be alive, but that's the Ellingson metabolism, I guess," Mitchell said with a chuckle.

The spaghetti benefit dinner will be held Tuesday, March 11, from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. There is a suggested donation of $25 per person, although guests who want to attend but can't afford the donation may pay a smaller fee.

Donations may also be made to the Mt. Baldy Community Club, P.O. Box 601, Mt. Baldy, Calif. 91759.

When You're Not Sure if it's Minor or Serious, You Want Secure Care.

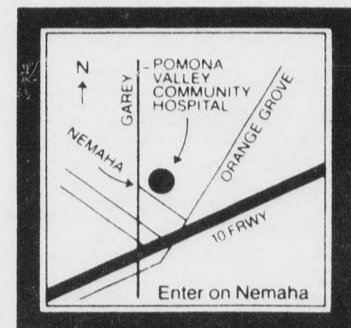

You're not a medical expert, so you're not always sure how serious an illness or accident may be.

That's why Pomona Valley Community Hospital developed Secure Care right next to its Emergency Room.

When you arrive at the emergency entrance, a special nurse will determine the severity of the problem. Serious emergencies are directed to the Emergency Room. Less serious problems are directed to Secure Care.

Secure Care has its own staff and separate treatment rooms to provide you with fast, efficient and inexpensive care. Secure Care is available for treating all types of minor illnesses and injuries from cuts and broken fingers to sore throats and flus.

If a person is unconscious, not breathing or bleeding badly, call 911.

"Skeletons In Our Closet"

Patricia Havens pointed to the human skeleton in the corner and faced the group of fifth graders from Zimmerman School.

"Do you know how we know that this is the skeleton of a man instead of a woman?" Havens asked the group.

"Because of the long fingernails," suggested one student tentatively.

The students continued to guess until one finally got it right and said that the skeleton's wide hips were the key to discovering its gender.

Explaining the difference between male and female skeletons is all in a day's work for Havens, who directs tours through the Rex W. Wignall Museum/Gallery at Chaffey College in Alta Loma.

Havens elaborated on the female skeleton, which she said came from India, a popular place to get skeletons for study all over the world. There are so many unclaimed bodies in India that the government sells them to other countries for medical purposes, she told the students.

The fifth grade class from Zimmerman School in Bloomington was just one of many classes that will visit the museum during the "Skeletons In Our Closet" exhibit on display until March 14.

The exhibit features skeletal and museum-quality taxidermy specimens of reptiles, mammals, amphibians and birds from the Chaffey College Life Science Division, the Natural History Museum of Los Angeles, Cerritos College, Scripps College, and the George C. Page Museum.

Jim DesLauriers, a Chaffey College zoologist, and Henry E. Childs, Jr., a professor emeritus and former vice president of Chaffey College, co-curators of the exhibit, explained that "Skeletons In Our Closet" is meant to show the adaptation of vertebrates, rather than their evolution.

They defined adaptation as how animals solve the problems of living, focusing on locomotion, weapons, and defenses.

"We have an extensive collection of specimens and we want to show it off," said DesLauriers, explaining why he and Childs put the show together.

Some items in the exhibit were garnered from the college's collection gathered over the 100-plus-year history of Chaffey College, DesLauriers said.

The San Diego Zoo and the U.S. Department of Fish and Game were also instrumental in providing many specimens.

"When things died and nobody else wanted them, we got them," Childs said.

Many of the animals whose skeletons and stuffed skins are on exhibit were killed in accidents.

"They became immortal by our processing them," Childs said.

A skeleton of an American Black Bear with a broken leg is a good example of that. DesLaurier said the bear was shot in a campground in the nearby Angeles National Forest. The bear had been tracked by radio for several years at the time of his death.

DesLaurier and Childs pointed out how the bear's leg bones mended out of alignment and said that probably made him a vicious character in the camp ground.

Most of the specimens in the exhibit were prepared by Childs or DesLaurier, or a Chaffey College student.

"Some student comes a long and wants a project, and we say, 'here's a box of bones, put it together,'" Childs said.

One of the more difficult anthropological puzzles was putting together the bones of a boa constrictor. Childs explained that the snakes' bones were cleaned by putting the body in a beetle colony.

"Hopefully we can get to it before they've eaten all the articulation," Childs said.

Among the other items on exhibit are the skeletons of an okapi, which is an animal half-way between a horse and a giraffe; an emu, a flightless Australian bird (the male emu plays the egg incubating and nurturing role while the female lays the eggs); a red kangaroo; a mountain lion; a Galapagos turtle from the San Diego Zoo; and a 40-million-year-old skull of a titanotherium. Forty million years is about eight times longer than man has been on earth, Childs said.

Although the rules of the museum are "don't touch," there is one table where visitors can experience for themselves the feel of an alligator hide and some other items.

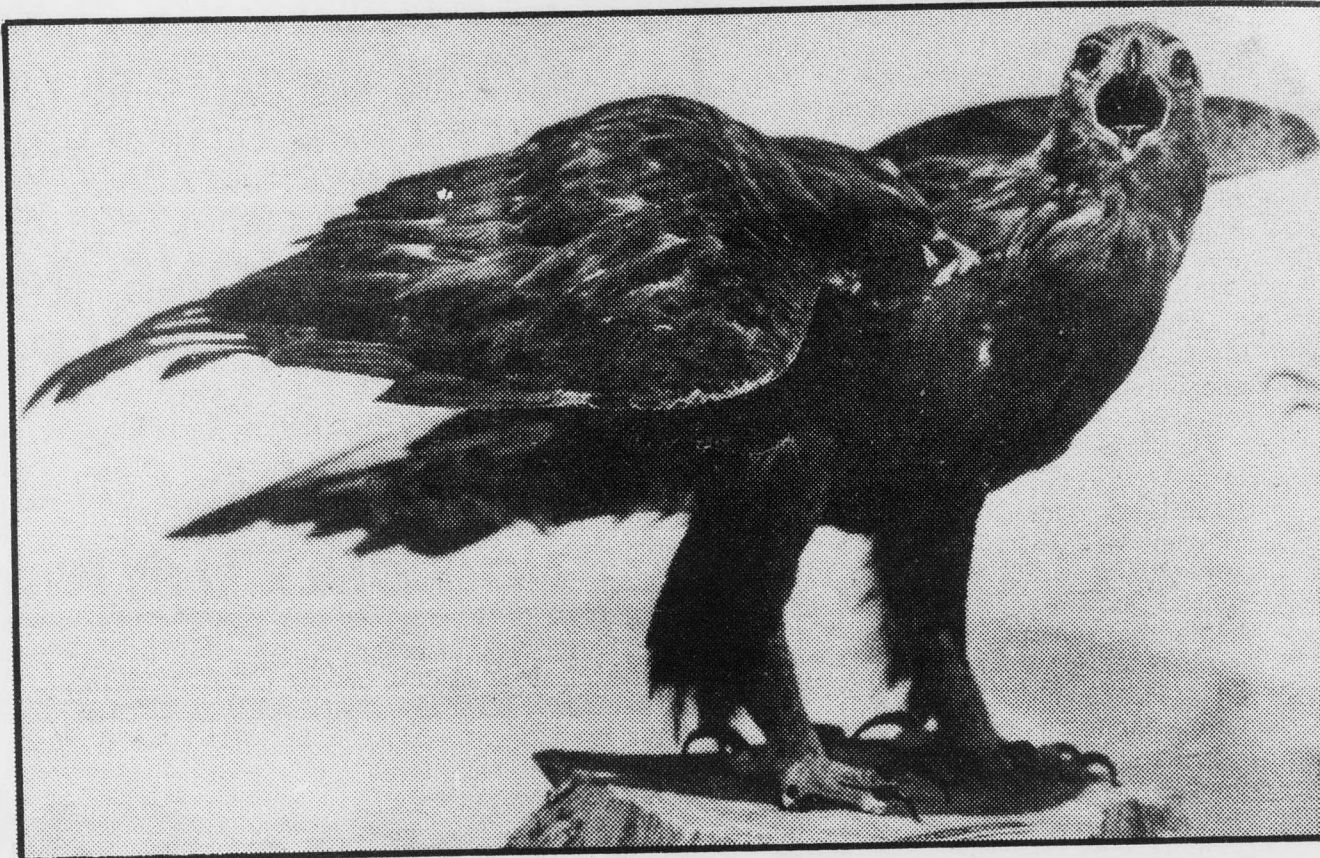

"That's the most rewarding part of it, seeing them get all exuberant over it," DesLauriers said.

Admission to the museum is free. Gallery hours are Monday through Friday, 12 noon to 4 p.m., Sundays 2 to 4 p.m. For reservations and information, call 987-1737, extension 475. □

Snags in R.C. project finally are worked out

By Marianne Aiken

Snags in a Rancho Cucamonga project that developers said last month was "like pulling teeth" have been worked out, with a few surprises.

The Irvine-based Christeson Co., developers of the Virginia Dare Winery retail/office complex at Foothill Boulevard and Haven Avenue, successfully appealed Feb. 5 a city condition that the company build a loading area on the southwest end of a historic grape crusher building in order to get approval on the development of a food court in the project.

The loading area requirement came as a surprise to the developers, who said the loading area was never an issue until the final Planning Commission hearing on Jan. 8.

Glenn Gellatly, project architect, said his Jan. 8 presentation to the commission represented six months of research "trying to satisfy all concerned."

Gellatly said that by the time Planning Commissioner Herman Rempel suggested Jan. 8 that a loading zone be worked into the plan, eliminating six parking spaces, the public hearing portion of the meeting was closed.

"I had no chance to respond," Gellatly said. "I wish to do so now."

Gellatly said the loading area would be used "sparingly at best, perhaps not at all," because most loading occurs in the early morning hours.

"This whole issue of a loading zone really comes as a surprise to us," Gellatly said.

Apparently, City Council members agreed that the loading area requirement was too much of a surprise move, because they held the company's appeal.

Instead of a loading zone, more landscaping will be added on the southwest corner of the building, eliminating one parking space, but balancing out the landscaping on the southeast corner of the building.

The Christeson Co. also dropped its appeal of a Planning Commission decision that the company be prepared to provide more parking for the Edwards Rancho Cucamonga six-screen theater that will open in the complex this summer.

The company tried to get permission to destroy the grape crusher building last October, but was turned down by the Historic Preservation Commission.

In November, a new design concept exposing the south, west, and east elevations of the city historic landmark for public viewing was worked out.

"The city has assured us that they will sign a development agreement with us which will address parking on a basis which will be satisfactory to all parties," said developer and managing partner Don Christeson.

Eaves raises $43,000, spends even more

By Don Green

Assemblyman Gerald Eaves raised nearly $43,000 in the last half of 1985, but spent slightly more and his campaign surplus dipped to under $16,000 at the start of 1986.

Eaves, D-Rialto, seeking re-election in the 66th District, received contributions totaling $68,802 in 1985. His expenditures were almost identical, $68,813.

Campaign financial statements recently were filed with the county Registrar of Voters Office for the reporting period of July 1 to Dec. 31. Following "threshold" requirements in state law for more frequent reports, Eaves actually filed three statements covering the six months.

In the last half of 1985, Eaves raised $42,652 and spent $46,913. He reported a year-end surplus of $15,871, compared to $20,111 on June 30.

His largest contributions in the period were $2,000 each from two political action committees (PACs), Bankers Responsible Government Committee and Insurers PAC. Neither PAC is affiliated with any single company or association.

Developer Joe Dilorio, president of the Caryn Co. in Rancho Cucamonga, gave $1,250. The Lakes Co., a development firm in Palm Desert, and Mercury Casualty Co. in Los Angeles each contributed $1,000.

He received $750 each from California Steel Industries Inc. in Fontana and from the PACs of the California Optometric Association and California Building Industry Association.

Contributing $500 each were:

The PACs of the California Association of Highway Patrolmen, California Association for the Gifted, California Correctional Peace Officers Association, California Motorcycle Dealers Association, California Restaurant Association, California State Employees Association, California Automobile Dealers Association, California Teamsters Union and Citizens for Safety.

He also received $500 each from the California Association of Sheet Metal and Air Condition Contractors; Creative Communities, a Huntington Beach development firm; Santa Fe Southern Pacific Corp. in Los Angeles; Shell Oil Co. in Houston; and Foster and Kleiser in Los Angeles, the outdoor advertising division of Metromedia Inc.

In the six months, Eaves raised $37,478 in itemized contributions of $100 or more.

His largest expenditure was a $10,000 contribution from his committee to Assembly Democrats 1985, a campaign committee controlled by Assembly Speaker Willie Brown, D-San Francisco.

Eaves also contributed $500 to the campaign committee of former Democratic Assemblyman Richard Alatorre, who was elected last year to the Los Angeles City Council.

Bader increases fund surplus with big surge in contributions

By Don Green

Local Assemblyman Chuck Bader raised nearly $77,000 in the last half of 1985, increasing his campaign surplus by more than $54,000.

Bader, R-Pomona, began 1986 with a surplus of $78,099. In all of 1985, his campaign committee raised $103,948 and spent $36,298.

Campaign financial reports for the period of July 1 to Dec. 31 were recently filed with the Registrar of Voters Office. In the period, Bader listed contributions of $76,698 and expenditures of $23,065.

His largest contribution in the period was $2,250 from JRS Vanguard Inc., the Rancho Cucamonga development firm.

The political action committee (PAC) of General Telephone employees and Insurers PAC each contributed $2,000. The Irvine Co. in Newport Beach, a land and development company, and the Beer Wholesalers PAC each gave $1,500.

Contributing $1,250 each were:

Robert Lewis of Newport Beach, chairman of the Foothill Beverage Co. in Pomona; the Los Angeles County Fair; Joe Dilorio of Rancho Cucamonga, president of the Caryn Co.; the PAC of the San Bernardino County Medical Society; Inco Homes in Upland and Alta Dena Dairy PAC.

Giving $1,000 each were:

The PAC of the Western Mobile Homes Association, California Building Industry PAC, California Teachers Association PAC, Laird Construction Co. in Montclair, Security Management Co. in Ontario, Matich Corp. in Colton, Griffin Homes in Calabasas, California Correctional Peace Officers Association PAC and the PAC of the Apartment Owners Association.

Bader received $750 from Mrs. Maxy Pope Alles of San Marino, $625 each from Western Waste Industries in Chino and Thomas Johnson of Pomona, a real estate businessman, and $600 from the PAC of Association of "BRAZIL" (R) Excellent — A great visual extravaganza, which by romping creative excess turns the nearly spent theme of Kafka-Orwellian warning about our engulfing techno-culture into a wild dark carnival. Jonathan Pryce plays the English bureaucrat who rebels against the octopus state, in flighty erotic dreams and then in life (though they overlap entrancingly). Former Monty Pythonite Terry Gilliam directed with audacious control over all his eye-boggling elements, and the spirited cast (Michael Palin, Ian Holm, Robert De Niro, Kim Griest, Bob Hoskins) delivers zinging comic chills. Tom Stoppard helped with the script, which might have used a little more work, but when you come out of this movie you've really seen something. The use of the old swooping, purring song "Brazil" is inspired, and so is much else.

"F/X" (R) — Bryan Brown stars as a special effects man, wrongly accused of murder, who clears his name and exposes the real killer in this suspense thriller. With Brian Dennehy, Diane Venora and Cliff De Young. Directed by Robert Mandel.

Recent releases

"THE BEST OF TIMES" (PG-13) Good — This foxy, affectionate comedy about small-town life and American sports mania stars Robin Williams in a payday role as a nebbishy banker who once dropped the ball at the big football game, and now craves a second chance. Kurt Russell is the former gridiron star reduced to working on vans, and Pamela Reed and Holly Palance also have fine, funny licks as the wives. Director Roger Spottiswoode finally gets a little cute, but the movie is nearly all strong, and there's a dinner party scene (with a line about acid rain) that is a classic. This is Williams' best straight comedy. With Donald Moffat, R.G. Armstrong.

"COLONEL REDL" (R) Good — A cool, at times too-consciously knowing film, with a very classy performance by Klaus Maria Brandauer as the Austro-Hungarian patriot and opportunist who schemed fatally high in the service of king and country. He's a remarkably sympathetic climber, though his devotion to the dying empire seems amazingly self-deluding. Istvan Szabo directed in a distanced European style (all chill blues and behind-the-scenes intrigue) that keeps us engaged if rarely excited. With Gudrun Landgrebe, Armin Mueller-Stahl, Jan Niklas. In German with English subtitles.

"DOWN AND OUT IN BEVERLY HILLS" (R) Good — Nick Nolte has one of his sexiest slob roles as Jerry, a laid-back bum who mooches into an unhappily rich Beverly Hills family headed by Richard Dreyfuss (at his best in years) and Bette Midler (who's too tamped down). Paul Mazursky directed this very light, appealingly wayward comedy, drawn from Renoir's "Boudu Saved From Drowning" but even more from Mazursky's plush, self-questioning life. The laughs keep coming, but could somebody please take the family dog off for a long walk? With the great Little Richard, as a neighbor.

"ELIMINATORS" (R) — A half-human android teams up with a beautiful scientist, a river guide and a mysterious Ninja to seek revenge and (you guessed it) save the world. With Andrew Pine, Denise Crosby, Patrick Reynolds, Conan Lee and Roy Dotrice. Directed by Peter Manoogian.

"FOOL FOR LOVE" (R) Fair — A beautifully atmospheric but flabby and wayward adaptation of Sam Shepard's play, with Shepard as the coyote-eyed range stud who returns to his big love (Kim Basinger, doing "Baby Doll" poses) at a grubby motel somewhere in the Symbolic West. They prowl and paw, coughing up dreamy memories and dramaturgic dialogue, while director Robert Altman groans to get some poetry flying. But it just sits there, a cow pile. Some helpful distraction is offered by Harry Dean Stanton as a paternal phantom and bottle guzzler, and by Randy Quaid (solidly real and thus out of place) as a confused visitor. When Shepard mounts his horse and ropes a garbage can, we know this movie should slink back to little theater.

"MURPHY'S ROMANCE" (PG-13) Good — A genial old-fashioned movie about a woman (Sally Field) who is wary of men but can't resist the local druggist, played in his best old-shoe Maverick manner by James Garner. This pleasant comedy, directed by Martin Ritt, gets a bit pious about nostalgia and the simple life, but the actors carry it easily, including the splendid Brian Kerwin as Sally's dopey, sponging ex-husband. Also with Corey Haim.

"MY CHAUFFEUR" (R) Forget it — Deborah Foreman plays the dippy-darling female chauffeur in a stable of crusty old males. She drives panty-stealing rock stars, workaholic executives and other stereotypes down this highway of potholes. It's amusing if you're willing to settle for a nothing script, eye-gouging direction and stiffed acting by a cast that includes cliff-chinned Sam Jones, Howard Hesseman, E.G. Marshall and Julius Harris. The director (more the embalmer) is David Beaird, once a leading light of Chicago theater.

"POWER" (R) Fair — Lots of puffing, little power. Richard Gere is the glib, GQ-elegant media consultant for politicians. He comes up with lousy ideas that everyone treats as brainstorms. That's the story of the script, too, which wastes fine actors (Julie Christie, E.G. Marshall, Beatrice Straight, Denzel Washington and, most enjoyable as a slob adviser, Gene Hackman) in a cheaply illogical attempt to create another "Network." The movie itself is what it means to lampoon: slick, empty packaging. Directed with energy but unavailing seriousness by Sidney Lumet.

Upland family wins sewage flood suit

By Kimberly Heinrichs

A family that took Upland and the Metropolitan Water District to court over a sewage flood in their home has received about $190,000 in damages — about one-fourth of what it had requested.

The Dennis Clappier family had asked for $700,000 for emotional stress and loss of his job after a city pipe burst, filling their Upland home a foot deep with sewage during a two-hour period in 1982. Of the total award, only $40,000 was granted for emotional stress to Clappier, his wife Barbara and their two college-age daughters.

A unanimous 12-member West Valley Superior Court jury ordered the MWD to pay 60 percent of the $183,275 award and Upland to pay the remaining 40 percent, according to attorneys in the case. About $123,000 of that amount was awarded as liability damages to the house and personal property.

In addition to the $183,275, the jury ruled that three employees of the Upland General Services Department at the time of the flood — including the director Ken Hoover — should pay separate punitive damages totaling about $6,000.

"We're essentially happy on the liability and unhappy on the damages," said Gary Wunderlin, attorney for the Clappiers.

Attorneys for the city, MWD and its contractor, J.F. Shey Construction Co., described themselves as generally pleased with the size of the award.

Judge Charles Havens will decide later this month if Wunderlin will be awarded partial attorney's fees for one of the causes named in the lawsuit. He hopes the judge will grant $40,000 to $50,000.

Before the 24-day trial which began in late December, Wunderlin quizzed potential jurors to determine their willingness to consider emotional stress. But he was disappointed with the jury's conclusion after three days of deliberation.

He described the Clappiers as happy that the jury placed blame for the flood at doors of Upland and MWD, as the two had been denying responsibility for four years.

"They believe it should have been higher, but they'll accept what the jury does," Wunderlin added.

Clappier and his wife, who now live in Scottsdale, Ariz., must use $100,000 of the award to repay their insurance company. The company, Fire Insurance Exchange, at first refused to pay for damage to the home. But when Clappier filed a lawsuit against it, the company settled out of court for $400,000 on the condition that the first $100,000 of the Clappier's award from the agencies determined at fault would be paid back.

While James Dunn, who represented the city, was pleased that the emotional judgement was "a very modest sum," he said he will protest the punitive damages lodged against General Services Director Ken Hoover for $2,500, as well as $2,500 against former employees John Kittle, the sewer crew foreman and $1,000 against Mike Day, a member of the crew.

She also encourages teenagers, particularly women, to discuss questions or problems with their parents.

"It saddens me to think so many people think abortion is an alternative. But I don't judge anyone. Decisions about having a baby are a personal matter.

"My thought is we should be more concerned about preventing unwanted pregnancies than preventing abortions. By the time one is talking about an abortion it's too late," she said.

Eliminating misconceptions about pregnancy and birth control is the aim of the many free lectures Randell presents schools and clubs.

"I try to explain how the various birth control methods work and why they work," she said.

"Unplanned pregnancies are a big problem in this country. About two-thirds of the women involved are between the ages of 18 and 30 years old. The other third is under the age of 18 or is 45 years old or older."

"I think my lectures make an impact. I try and tell women about the services offered by the health department because I understand private physicians and gynecologists charge a great deal of money. But the biggest obstacle is trying to teach young women and men about family planning," she said.

Randell said she considers a young woman's financial abilities, family background and personal beliefs when she counsels.

"People have to understand decisions about pregnancies and giving babies up for adoption are very difficult ones to make. Giving a baby up for adoption is the greatest gift you can give to someone but it also is the greatest sacrifice," she said.

SPORTS

Eric Vilchis/The Daily Report

Upland High School's Chrissie Morgan (5) and Cindy Gessig scramble for a loose ball during recent action. The Lady Scots open the CIF playoffs Saturday at South Torrance.

Upland girls' soccer team visits Fontana for CIF playoff opener

It's going to be a tough week of soccer for West Valley high school teams, as the CIF playoffs get underway starting Wednesday.

The Chino girls squad, third place finishers in the Hacienda League, will kick things off for local teams on Wednesday with a 2A division wild card game at Temple City. The Cowgirls are one of four girls teams representing the West Valley in the playoffs this year, with four boys teams also advancing.

Thursday's action will spotlight the boys, with three 4A division games of local interest on tap. Upland (Baseline League runner-up) visits Fontana (CBL runner-up), Alta Loma, the Baseline League champion, will host Citrus Belt League third place finisher Redlands, while Damien (BL runner-up) is at third-seeded Riverside Poly (CBL champions).

In the 3A division, other contests of note include Hacienda League champion Diamond Bar hosting Lakewood, while HL number two finisher Garey is home to Wilson-Hacienda Heights and third place Garey visiting top-ranked Esperanza.

Friday the girls playoffs get into full swing, with Upland (Baseline #3) having to face 4A top seed Edison (Sunset League champs) on the road. Alta Loma, this year's Baseline champion, hosts Ocean League runner-up North Torrance.

In the girls 2A division Friday, Montclair, the Hacienda League champ and number two seed, will host the winner of Wednesday's wild card battle between Oak Park and Villanova Prep.

Upland girls enter the CIF cage playoffs

Once again West Valley girls basketball has earned a dominate roll in the CIF playoffs with seven teams named to respective division playoff brackets this past week and one of those teams was Upland High School.

Local squads have earned six CIF-Southern Section championships in three different divisions since 1978, with at least one team making the finals seven of the last nine seasons.

The pairings, released Monday by the Southern Section, show this year's seven collecting games in Saturday's first round, although one will have to wait until after Wednesday's Wild Card games to find out it's opponent.

In all, five of the seven local squads earned home games in the first round. Upland (15-10), however, will have to travel to Torrance for a 4A battle with South Torrance Saturday night.

Upland coach Steve Russi, which watched his team beat St. Lucy's Priory in last Friday's Baseline finale, knows it could be worse.

"We could have drawn (top-seed) Muir," he laughed. "I don't know much about South Torrance save it's not in the strongest league (the Bay League), and that it's a long way to drive. But it could be worse."

Who will Upland play should the Highlanders beat the Spartans Saturday night? Probably Muir, which hosts Bishop Montgomery in the first round.

Elsewhere in the West Vally girls playoff picture, Joe Murillo's Chino team earned the top seed in the 2A division. The Cowgirls, ranked the number one team all year long in both the CIF-SS 2A poll and Cal-Hi Sports' Division II State ratings, finished the regular season 24-1, with their only loss coming to Muir of Pasadena.

Chino must wait to see just who it will draw for Saturday's first round contest. Temple City, third place finisher in the Rio Hond League, battles at South Hills (Valle Vista #3) Wednesday night, with the winner earning a shot at the Cowgirls.

Ontario Christian (10-9), which earned one of two at-large berths in the 1A brackets, will be at Elsinore on Saturday night.

Ontario coach Chris Stephens, having guided his Lady Jaguars to their first playoff berth ever with a second place finish behind Chino in the Hacienda League, was less than happy about his squad's draw in the first round.

"We really don't get any respect," insisted Stephens. "I guess I should be happy we're home instead of traveling to Indio. But you figure, of our five losses, two are to Chino and one is against Brea (the number one team in the 3A). I'd think we're one of the best 20-5 teams around, but with Chino right next door, you just don't get any breaks."

Indio, which tied Brawley for the Desert Valleys League crown this season but advanced as the league's number two team, has a strong tradition of competitive girls squads. The Rajahs won the 2A crown in 1983, beating Brea 56-42 in the finals behind the efforts of 2A Player-of-the-Year Gretchen DeWitt.

City wants to pick own ambulance service

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Soon the county will determine which emergency ambulance service will serve Upland, but city officials say that should be decided locally.

"We're just not interested in having them come in and interfere with the way we're doing things," City Attorney Don Maroney said.

He said the city has been receiving emergency services from both the Trans Medical Inc.

consortium, which includes Mercy and Kniffen services, and Canyon Medical Services for the past year.

"We're perfectly happy with what we have, which is both. We're getting good service," Maroney said.

About nine months ago, the City Council sent the county Board of Supervisors a policy statement supporting its belief that the county should leave the decision up to the city, Mayor Richard Anderson said.

The statement was approved by all members, with the exception of Anderson who abstained because as an attorney he has represented Canyon Medical before.

However, according to County Health Officer Dr. George Pettersen a state law, the Emergency Medical Services Act passed in 1981, gives the county authority to determine services for the entire county, including the cities.

"As a general rule, cities do not have staff that's prepared to evaluate medical services. The county does," Pettersen said.

The county's Emergency Medical Care Committee is putting together demographic data to determine whether the area containing Upland and Rancho Cucamonga need one or two emergency ambulance services.

"At the present time it looks like one," Pettersen said, adding that the area has three services now, including Cole-Schaefer Ambulance Service.

The committee will be holding a hearing on the ambulance question Feb. 27 and will take competitive bids for the service later. It then will make a recommendation to Pettersen, who said he will make the final decision.

Michael Leight, the attorney representing Canyon Medical Services, said he is sure the decision already has been made. "Dr. Pettersen is doing nothing neighbors have been complaining to the city for at least two years.

Green said he called Councilman Chuck Buquet about the speeding problem last May, and a 25 mph speed limit sign went up soon after that.

But Gardner said it wasn't until they threatened to call the local newspaper that they got any further response from the city.

Earlier this week, a curb was painted red to keep motorists from parking their cars on the street and blocking traffic, and a yellow line was painted down the middle of the street.

"When we told them we'd call The Daily Report, we got some action," Gardner said.

Assistant City Manager Bob Rizzo's initial reaction when questioned by The Daily Report about the problems on Helms Avenue was, "slow news day, huh?"

Rizzo said he, Burris and a deputy from the sheriff's department talked with Green last Monday.

"They wanted a four-way stop (at the intersection of Helms and Devon) and the problem there is there's large storm drain there," Rizzo said. "The traffic count there would not merit a four-way stop."

When asked about the hole in the vacant piece of property, Rizzo said that to him, a lot of the trash in the area looked like it was generated by residents, that it was not the type of trash someone would throw out their window as they drove by.

Rizzo said three owners of vacant property at the top of the street were sent notices Tuesday saying that their property was found to be in violation of city codes because of the presence of weeds, trash, stagnant water and rodents.

The letters state that the property owners have 14 days to clean up the property or they will be issued a warning citation from the city.

more than serving as an agent of Trans Medical and doing things for the benefit of Trans Medical," Leight said, charging that Pettersen is doing favors for the company, because its director, Homer Aerts, keeps him in office.

"Dr. Pettersen just won't include Canyon in anything," Maroney said. "In phone conversations, he has been in favor of the consortium."

In addition, Aerts is one of eight members of the county medical committee making the recommendation. Pettersen said Aerts will refrain from discussion and voting because of his conflict of interest.

About a year ago Canyon Medical sued the county and Pettersen when it was refused paramedic certification.

Pettersen received a court order to certify the company's paramedics. The judge also issued a court order allowing the company to practice emergency services while the county made an appeal. That appeal still is pending.

"The county board made the determination that there was no need for another ambulance service," Pettersen said.

However, Leight charged that county board is supporting Trans Medical too. Since the board decided to support the existing service, Trans Medical, Canyon Medical sued the county rather than the company.

"Rather than have Trans Medical pay for its own lawyers to fight this, we're going to have the county (take it on), and have the county counsel fight it," he said.

In addition, Aerts contributed $149 in 1985 to Supervisor Cal McElwain's campaign for re-election in June, according to campaign finance statements.

Besides the conflict of interest issue, Leight charges that the state has given the county authority to control emergency services to unincorporated areas, but not the authority over cities. In a recent United States District Court case, the city of Indio won the right to determine its ambulance service.

"I do know if Dr. Pettersen attempts to implement this plan to the detriment of my client we have prepared a lawsuit and will file," Leight said.

Meanwhile Leight will attend the hearing at the end of the month, along with Rancho Cucamonga officials who have expressed interest in giving public testimony against the plan. Anderson said Upland may not send anyone.

"I think they know what our position is," he said, adding that he doubted the committee would take it into account.
